

MICHAEL J GALKO

WHEN APART

the smooth glass
of the night sea

stares up at the moon,
counting her dimples.

This is one way
to admire a lover.

The moon peers down,
wishing for hands

not made of light.
This is another.